The curtains opened to reveal a giant disco ball, a psychedelic backdrop and a thunderous beat that made the crowd go wild.

The legendary KC and the Sunshine Band brought a taste of the '70s to The Sharon L. Morse Performing Arts Center on Thursday night, and the audience couldn't get enough.

The band grew popular in the '70s and has since sold more than 100 million records and won nine Grammy nominations, three Grammy Awards and an American Music Award.

The group opened the show with some of their most popular songs such as "Get Down Tonight," "(Shake, Shake, Shake) Shake Your Booty" and "Boogie Shoes."

"You know, I'm 67 years old now," said Harry Wayne Casey, the lead singer in the band. "What the hell happened? I can't move the way I like it"

Once a Sensation, 'Walking Dead' Is Now Just Another Show

At some point, a television sensation becomes just another show. The numbers illustrate how that's become the case with AMC's drama, "The Walking Dead." The zombies are taking a break at the halfway point of their ninth season, following an episode on Sunday that was seen by 5.1 million people. The Nielsen company said that at a similar point last year, the midseason finale reached 7.9 million people.

"I've gained weight and I thought, 'Oh, I'm going to have to rename the group to KFC and the Sunshine Band,'" he said.

Casey assured the room that everything about the show was live, and while he may joke about being old, he still has the voice and energy that made the group successful.

"We enjoy the concerts here at The Sharon," said Stan Neu, of the Village of Fernandina. "KC and the Sunshine Band is a big name. There are some good tribute bands, but it's nothing like the real thing."

Mandi and Steve Sellars, of Ocoee, were absolutely ecstatic to be at the show.

Steve first saw the band when he was 16 and they performed in front of the castle at Magic Kingdom.

"It was just high-energy and very entertaining," he said. "And the band was incredible."

Steve has seen the band about five more times since then.

"The music makes you feel good. It's funk," Mandi said. "It makes you want to dance."

And dance they did.

Most audience members (some of them dressed in bell-bottoms, vests and hippie headbands) spent a majority of the show on their feet and dancing as the band played a collection of old hits and Christmas songs.
